

NEW YORK CITY

Food & Mood

Issue: 2 Year: 1 Price: $6.95 (U.S.) Winter 2006

Richard Sandoval

upper east side-dining in style

by Doris Jane Black

Café B

Mediterranean

135 East 65th Street
(bet. Park & Lexington)
Tel: (212) 774-1999

Cafe B

Cafe B, formerly Barbaluc, is a hip, cool, and trendy spot to spend great afternoons during weekdays. The menu demonstrates classical global cuisine infused with sophisticated European accents. On weekends, Cafe B is the meeting point of the "stylish" Upper East Siders, Europeans and socialites.

New York City's Upper East Side stretches between Central Park and the East River, starting at 59th Street and going all the way up to 96th Street. The area is also famous for its remarkable properties known as some of the most expensive real estate in the country. You can spend a leisure day in Central Park, browse through the shops along Madison, Fifth and Park Avenues, visit the Metropolitan, Whitney or Guggenheim museums. Having glamorous recognition, this neighborhood is filled with a majority of the city's most luxurious homes, designer boutiques, museums, musical entertainment, and of course, fabulous dining. With some of the city's most highly rated chefs situated in the area, the diverse cuisine is nothing short of superb from fine dining, European bistros and cafes, to tiny hole in the wall eateries. This is a neighborhood not to be missed and you will capture the spirit of sophisticated New York City life style, if you pay a little attention to detail.

Dining in

Tribeca Upper East Side

hotel dining • steakhouses • latin cuisine • night life