TECHNOLOGY AND GADGETS FROM A GIRL'S PERSPECTIVE

HairMax LaserComb Combats Baldness and Promises Thicker, Fuller, Healthier Looking Hair

We recently attended Hairmax's LaserComb launch Party in New York at Bruno Jamais Restaurant Club and got to find out about this new product that is ready to aid a lot of men and women suffering from a very distressing condition - hair loss. Contrary to popular belief, hair loss is often a major issue for women as much as it is for men. And not everyone is keen on the popular drug treatment methods. HairMax LaserComb has been so far proven to be the only effective drug-free treatment alternative. It's easy to use and it requires just passing it through your hair for 10 to 15 minutes at a time, three times a week. The LaserComb is not cheap at a retail price of $545, but neither is a constant supply of Rogain and similar drugs. And we personally approve a gadget over a drug any day. But in case the idea of using a "laser" on your head gets you nervous, it's important to know that the technology behind the LaserComb is certified and FDA approved, so you can feel confident that you are safe using it.
