Ramona Singer, from the television program The Real Housewives of NYC, hosted the Covet Restaurant & Lounge launch party in midtown Manhattan. The event was packed with models, designers, photographers, writers, fashionista's, and people that enjoy the night life. Covet was brought to life by Eric Milon and Andre Hnatyszak. They envisioned an "elegant evening destination, reminiscent of European class, blended with New York City Sophistication."

Covet has a restaurant on the street level, and an intimate cocktail lounge below. Camera's flashed the moment Ms. Singer made her grand entrance on the red carpet. She visited Covet's restaurant area first. There she posed with owners Eric Milon and Andre Hnatyszak in a dining room with large Zeppelin chandeliers by designer Marcel Wanders. The walls were lined with colorful oil paintings by Robert Lambert. Ramona Singer gave interviews and posed with Covet's Chef John Keller, who has worked at the acclaimed restaurants Bruno Jamais and Nobu. Ramona Singer also posed in the dining area with fashion designer Andrea Behar, and Lady Barber Kathleen Giordano.

Downstairs in the lounge area, the party was in full swing. Fashion designer Alia Khan mingled and Sheredan Wiland mingled with guests. Stunning model Taylor Erickson, were among the several attractive guests turning many heads. Award winning broadcast journalist Marlie Hall, and renowned Dr. William Gibbs added style and smoothness to the event. Other notable guests were Kimmy Smith - Editor In Chief of Kitten Lounge, a lifestyle blog; and playboy photographer Andrew Einhorn with his new book Naked Coast To Coast.
